this evening for Savannah, having been chartered by the International Emigration Society to take about 200 negro colonists from Savannah to Monrovia, Liberia. The steamer is under the command of Captain Henry Wilbourg.

The emigrants will be accompanied by an agent of the society. The Horsa will probably arrive at Savannah on Saturday, and, if pessible, sail for Liberia the same day.

The society has organized its first party of emigrants with great care, selecting them mainly from Mississippt. In making the selections only men, both single and married, of good physical condition, have been chosen and permitted to join. The married men will be accompanied by their wives and families, and the selections and permitted to join. The married ones twenty-five acres upon their arrival in Liberia.

The Liberian Government will shelter the colonists for three months, until they have built their own homes. Good mechanies, carpenters especially, it is claimed, can have pienty of work at good wagos, while there familiar with farmwork can engage in coffee-growing.

IT IS NEARLY ENDED.

PROBABLE TO-DAY.

Mr. Crump's Masterly Dissection of

VERY SARCASTIC.

And, again, when the speaker came to refer to the failure to hear the Addence of Captain J. B. Pettus he was particularly earnest and sarcastic. He succeeded, however, in getting the full effects of the Pettus evidence before the jury. Mr. Crump's speech, which was directed simply to a review of the evidence, was a model of its kind.

One of the oldest lawyers at the Albemarie Bar was heard to remark when Mr. Crump had concluded that he had "never heard such a cicar, argumentative, and convincing summing up of evidence" in his life. It devolved upon Mr. Crump to clear up the mysterles and inconsistencies of the evidence, and there is no doubt of the fact that he threw hight upon certain phases of the case hitherto involved. It was a brilliant effort and did great credit to the criminal attorney from Richmond.

COLONEL DUKE AGAIN.

He heard, he said, Colonel Craig's speech and saw the magnificent acting by that gentleman, and from that speech he was certain that Goodman was innocent. In all his life he had never received a fee for prosecuting a man for his life and liberty. Colonel Duke indulged in some delightful reminiscences, speaking for a half hour before court adjourned for din-

As soon as the court reconvened Mr Parrien began his speech. The court-room was packed—indeed, such a jam has neve-before been seen there on the occasion before been seen there on the occasion of a trial. Quite a number of ladies were in the "box" to the left of the Judge while his Honor's reserved platform was occupied by as many men as could be crowded upon it.

bringing to the attention of the Jury the verdict at the former trial, and said that it was a travesty upon justice.

The speaker then read the decision in the Ward-White shooting case, which was tried in Abingdon, and applied it to the present case.

The prisoner was entitled to the benefit of every doubt. Certainly the defence has created a reasonable supposition that the prisoner was excusable or justifiable in his act. For the first haif hour Mr. Parrish spoke upon the instructions.

He was very bitter in his denunciation of Mr. Craig for telling the jury that the defence were entitled to no benefits of the instruction which related to killing in the heat of passion, because that was inconsistent with the plea of self-defence. The defence were entitled to the benefit of both instructions, regardless of Mr. Craig, who represents the "hatred and persecution of the prosecutors."

THE CAUSE OF RIGHT.

Continuing, the speaker said he loved to speak for the cause of right. For nine months he had stood by the prisoner because he believed Goodman to be a persecuted man. Never in the history of Virginia had there been a case similar to this one where conviction followed.

The lawyer from Covington was very strong in his ridicule of the cases cited by Mr. Letcher as parallel to this one. In one of the cases reference was made to a "pole-axe," and juryman John Hopkins, at the request of Mr. Parrish, explained what a "pole-axe" was. In referring to the Clark-Moffett affair, Mr. Parrish said that a minister always made a mistake when he went outside of the Gospel, Here Dr. I. A. C. Ridedsoc and Dr. J. William Jones, who were sitting in THE CAUSE OF RIGHT. a mistake when he went outside of the Gospel. Here Dr. I. A. C. Bledsoe and Dr. J. William Jones, who were sitting in the Sheriff's box, were seen to nod ap-provingly. "It is the first time," con-tinued Mr. Parrish, "that I have had a chance to get even with the preachers who have been hitting at me for the last twenty five years."

THE UNWRITTEN LAW.

Mr. Parrish grew eloquent when he came to speak of the "unwritten" law in Virginia, which allows no man to destroy the peace and sanctity of the home circle. He drew a beautiful picture of Captain Goodman's working his way up from brakeman to conductor, and supporting a little family, and was extremely severe when he came to speak of Parsons, the proprietor of a big hotel. In speaking of the letter he inquired, "Did you ever read anything so vile, so bitter, so foul?". He was particularly caustic in his denunciation of Parsons for writing such a letter and touchingly pathetic in picturing its effect upon Goodman. He explained in detail the various diagrams of Gladys Inn and reviewed the evidence bearing upon the tragedy.

At 6 o'clock court adjourned until 10 to-morrow, when Mr. Parrish will resume his argument. He has already spoken four hours.

The chances are that at least one gentleman stands a very good chance, but the knowing ones just now will not indicate who the fortunate man is. Ex-Congressman Kilgore, of Texas, according to the prevailing opinion, is likely to be appointed to one of the judgeships. He lives contiguous to that country, and is quite familiar with the laws of the section. He has been a good friend of the President's, except on the silver issue, and then he always stood by the sentiments of his constituents.

The reference made in this correspondence yesterday to the fact that it has been the practice of the House Committee on Elections to stand as a rule by the State laws in deciding contests is clearly shown in the case of Miller against Elliott, from South Carolina, in the Fifty-second Congress, and that case was very much like that of Goode against Epes, from Virginia, before the last House, and about which such a how! was raised by certain people in the State. The whole case hinged on the action of the canvassing boards in some of the counties

Reports from the foundries are somewhat conflicting. In the Chicago district there is some improvement among foundries in the amount of business. The Pittsburg market has shown practically no change in the week, either as to volume or prices.

A contagious uneasiness has been noticed in the coke regions since the strike of Pittsburg district miners, but there is no development yet that would fix the price of the April 1st. The advance in freight on bituminous coal in Ohio means higher fart costs to all consumers of coal from these districts, and the indications are that the extremely low fuel basis in all industries is about at an end.
